

Questions for Brian: what we need to finish the site

The new site is built and passing its technical checks — 218 pages, a complete 55-entry Pest Library, full schema, and the quote form live on every page. What is left is information only you can supply.

Everything marked MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH is a genuine blocker: the page is built but currently carries a placeholder, a guess, or nothing at all. The rest makes the site measurably stronger and can follow after launch.

Short answers are fine. Where a question asks for a number or a URL, just write it in — we handle the rest.

Fastest route: answer sections 1 and 2 and we can launch. Sections 3 to 7 are the content that will pull ahead of every competitor in the area, and we can work through them over a few phone calls rather than in writing.

1 Business details we are currently guessing

These five appear on all 218 pages and in the data Google reads. Wrong values here are wrong everywhere at once.

MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH

What are your exact office hours?

The site currently says “24-hour emergency line; office Mon–Fri 8am–5pm.” We wrote that as a best guess. It must match your Google Business Profile character for character, or Google treats them as two different businesses.

Office hours, and separately: is the emergency line genuinely 24/7?

MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH

What is the 920 number that appears in the quote form?

Your GoHighLevel form tells people to “Text HELP to +1 920-502-7990,” but every other place on the site publishes 866-BUGBOSS (866-284-2677). Is the 920 line a real second number we should publish, an SMS-only compliance line, or something to change in the form?

MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH

Can you send the links to your Google Business Profile and Yelp listings?

We are linking to search results rather than your actual profiles, because we could not confirm the real URLs. Open each listing, copy the address bar, paste it below.

Google Maps URL, then Yelp URL.

MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH

Is “BugBoss The X-Terminator” the exact registered legal name?

It appears in the copyright line, the legal pages, and the structured data Google reads. We also list DBA “The BugBoss” and business registration #535382 — please confirm both.

MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH

Is your service area right?

We are claiming Waupaca, Shawano, Outagamie, Waushara, Oconto and Langlade counties, with deep coverage of the rural corridor around Clintonville. Any town on the site you do not actually travel to? Anywhere you do serve that we have missed?

2 Legal pages and the guarantee

Two pages are live with placeholder text on them today. They need real content before launch, and the guarantee needs its terms pinned down.

MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH

What exactly does your guarantee cover, and for how long?

The guarantee page currently promises “if a covered pest returns between scheduled visits, we come back at no additional charge” — but it never names the covered pests or the time period. We deliberately avoided the words “lifetime warranty.” We need: which pests are covered, what the window is (30 days? between services? the season?), and what voids it.

MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH

Do you have a privacy policy and terms of service, or should we draft them?

Both pages exist and both say “Placeholder — replace before launch.” If you have language from your old site or your insurer, send it. Otherwise we can draft a starting point for your review — but we are not lawyers and you should have someone check it.

Who is your insurer, and what are the coverage limits?

We say “licensed and insured” throughout. Commercial clients — restaurants, food processing, schools, healthcare — routinely ask for a certificate of insurance before they will book. Being able to state this plainly wins those jobs.

3 Photos

Nine real photos are already on the site and they are a genuine asset — no stock imagery anywhere. A few additions would go a long way.

Can we get a proper headshot of you?

Your photo now appears on all 55 Pest Library pages in the expert box next to your applicator licence number. The current one is a field photo and does the job, but a clean portrait would carry that credibility better.

Do you have before-and-after photos from real jobs?

Bat exclusion, a sealed rodent entry point, a hornet nest removal, a cleaned-up attic. These are the single most persuasive images a pest company can show, and almost none of your competitors have them.

4 Case studies — the biggest single opportunity

This is the highest-value item on the list and the one most competitors never build. A gallery is not a case study.

Can you walk us through five or six memorable jobs?

The format that works is: what the pest was, what kind of property, which town, what you actually did, and how it turned out. Each one becomes a page that works as a local page, a service page and a proof point at the same time — and it is the format AI search results quote most readily, because it contains a specific verifiable claim.

Which jobs are you proudest of, or which do you tell people about?

The bat colony nobody else would touch, the restaurant that passed inspection after failing, the farmhouse with a decade of cluster flies. Those stories are the ones worth writing up. This is easier on a phone call than in writing — just note the jobs here and we will call.

5 Pricing and payment

Two things visitors look for that the site cannot currently answer.

Can we publish starting prices or typical ranges?

Every service page has a natural place for “what it costs” and every one is currently silent. You do not have to publish a fixed price list — “most single-family homes start around $X” or “inspections are free” is enough, and it filters out the calls that were never going to book.

Do you offer financing or payment plans?

For larger wildlife exclusion and bat jobs this can be the difference between booking and not. If you offer it, or would consider it, we can build a financing page — a cluster no competitor in your market has built.

What payment methods do you take?

Card, check, cash, invoicing for commercial accounts. Small detail, asked constantly.

6 Commercial work

Sixteen industry pages are built and written to the relevant compliance standards. Confirming a few things makes them credible rather than theoretical.

MUST HAVE BEFORE LAUNCH

Which of the 16 commercial industries do you genuinely serve?

Restaurants, food processing, grocery, dairy, manufacturing, warehousing, offices, hotels, retail, property management, schools, healthcare and senior living, agricultural, grain and feed, veterinary and kennels, museums. Any you would turn down, or are not equipped for, we should remove rather than claim.

Do you provide documentation and service logs for audits?

Food processing and healthcare clients need inspection-ready records. The pages currently say you deliver documented service. Confirm that is accurate, and tell us what you actually provide.

Any commercial clients who would give a testimonial or let us name them?

A named local business carries far more weight than an anonymous review, especially for winning other commercial work.

7 Ongoing — the one number that needs to move

Everything technical is handled. Reviews are the one area where the site cannot help you on its own.

How are you currently asking customers for Google reviews?

You have 95 reviews at 4.9 stars, which beats every rural competitor — the nearest has 17. Reviews are the weakest of the eight things we score the site on, and the only one the build cannot fix. A simple routine at the end of each job is what moves it.

Would you be willing to record short phone videos on jobs?

Thirty seconds of you pointing at a wasp nest or a sealed entry point, filmed on your phone. It feeds TikTok and YouTube, and video carries real weight in search. You already have the TikTok account.

Anything about the business we have got wrong, or missed?

You founded BugBoss with Amber in April 2021, you hold Wisconsin Commercial Applicator certification #103689 in aquatic/mosquito and structural, and you do not lock people into contracts. If any of that is off, or there is something we should be saying and are not, this is the place.

Send answers however is easiest — reply by email, write on this and photograph it, or book a call and we will fill it in while we talk. Sections 1 and 2 unblock launch; everything else can follow.
